He took no heed of the symptoms of serious illness, and increased them by his unremitting attention to work, which no persuasion or remonstrance would induce him to relax. One day he was seen painfully gathering up some papers that had fallen on the floor, and his reply to an entreaty that he would lie down and rest was Sir Harry all over-- My dear fellow, the Government don t pay me for lying down! He was working within three days of his death, and it was work, not the ordinary attack of remittent fever from which he was suffering, that killed him--gently, in his sleep, --on Sunday morning, March 22nd, 1885. He never allowed his brain a moment s rest, and his ceaseless mental activity rendered him abnormally sensitive to an illness which, though not light, would not, at the stage which it had reached, have given cause for alarm in ordinary circumstances. So wrote Hillier at the time, and O Conor, in announcing the sad tidings to Consul-General Hughes (26th March) said the same: -- Something seems to have suddenly given way in the brain or the heart: in fact he died from the unceasing strain put on a brain requiring long rest and repose. He had not a thought but what was devoted to his country s interest, and a truer patriot or more single-minded, able Minister England has never had. I little thought that he would...
